Parents' Action Urged

By City Health Official

'Fluoridate for Your Children's Sake'

Public health authorities called upon parents of Victoria yesterday to rally in a militant demand for fluoridation of the water supply.

"Parents strongly supporting this measure will bring fluoridation to Victoria over the campaign of the irresponsible, ill-advised anti-fluoridation faction of our community," said G. K. Sammon, chairman of the Victoria-Esquamelt Union Board of Health.

"Fluoridation of drinking water is perhaps the soundest public health measure ever proposed.

"It has received more intensive, basic study over the last 50 years than most health projects which are recommended and readily accepted by the public.

"In addition, it has a great number of authoritative experts in favor of it and has been endorsed by the medical and dental professions, not only of Canada and the United States, but also of many other countries throughout the world."

Speaking for the health department, Mr. Sammon said "ill-informed" opponents of fluoridation had worked hard to prevent institution of "this fine method of reducing dental ill-health," and had been quite successful in their efforts.

"The reasons for opposition to fluoridation are well known," he said. "In many cases the opposition stems from publicity-seekers, persons with commercial interests, such as selling pamphlets and home remedies; misguided champions, food faddists, and the uninformed."

"These people, either knowingly or not, are denying our children the advantages of this fine health measure. No longer can we truthfully turn our back on a means of reducing dental decay by 70 per cent. Every parent and grandparent should demand that fluoridation be started without delay. It is only by an active interest in fluoridation that your health authorities can institute the means of providing better dental health for children.

"All doctors and dentists have, through their professional societies, endorsed fluoridation without a single dissenting voice. Turn to them for advice and they will also advise you to act, and act strongly, in favor of fluoridation."

"Each day more than 30,000,000 people on this continent drink artificial ly fluoridated water. In British Columbia, there are five communities which have started fluoridation and there are several more considering it.

"Common sense tells us that this many persons cannot be drinking water containing 'rat poison' or substances that will cause cancer or heart disease, or any of the other silly things attributed to it."

"Also, these people can anticipate a marked improvement in their children's teeth over the next few years with no ill effects on their health. They should be commended for their wisdom in starting fluoridation."

"Your health department is wholeheartedly behind fluoridation. It has been proven to be cheap, safe and effective. Our information is not clouded with half-truths, prejudice, or partisan interests. We recommend this to you and squarely place the job in your hands."

"An active demand for fluoridation by militant parents is the best method of getting this fine health measure in Victoria."

"Think about it, talk about it, feel free to seek information, and most important, be ready to do something about it."

5000 Workers March Today On Duplessis

QUEBEC (CP)—An estimated 5,000 workers march on the legislative buildings today.

A government spokesman said Friday they will march on a virtually empty building whose doors will have been bolted.

The demonstration, union officials say, is a protest against a government decision not to intervene in the bitter strike of copper mine workers at Murdochville, Que., and an effort to draw attention to labor problems.

BRIEF TO DUPLESSIS

There will be no one to greet labor leaders who plan to present a brief to Premier Duplessis after the group takes up position in front of the long grey-stone building. Police will be posted at each door.

The Quebec premier is to be out of town. He normally visits his home town of Trois-Rivieres or travels to Montreal for weekends.

THOUSAND CARS

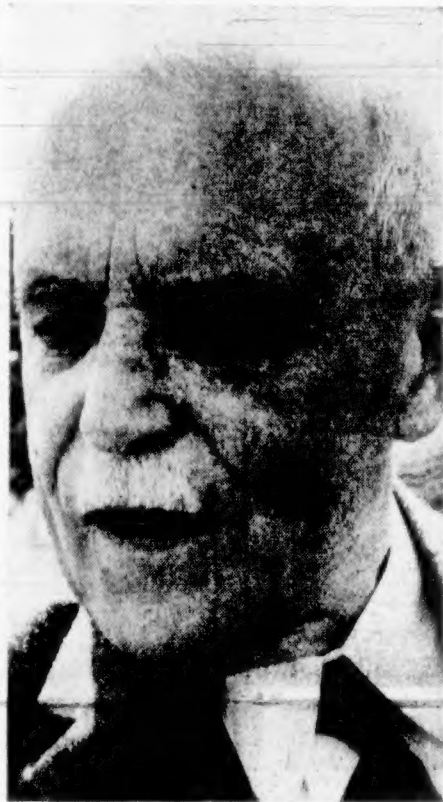

One thousand cars will carry workers from the Montreal area, Louis Laberge, president of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council CLC announced Thursday.

3,000 FROM QUEBEC
Jean Marchand, secretary general of the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor, said about 3,000 workers from Quebec City will take part.

From Murdochville, the copper mining town in the Gaspé Peninsula where the United Steelworkers of America CLC continues a six-month strike, 50 strikers are travelling 400 miles upriver by bus to join the march.

STARTS AT 7 A.M.

The Montreal group is scheduled to start at 7 a.m. for the 180-mile drive to Quebec City. Liquor will be banned from all cars and special steps are to be taken to enforce safety.

'Hitches' Stall U.S. Satellite

TORONTO (CP)—The next March to set up global stations to track the man-made moon.

Dr. Berkner is among 300 U.S. scientists here for the 11-day assembly of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics. More than 1,200 delegates from 56 countries are discussing results of their studies of the earth and to assess first results of the International Geophysical Year.

It was believed originally the U.S. planned to fire its satellite—a basketball-size metal sphere packed with scientific instruments—this fall. Various factors, ranging from cameras to rocket fuel, had been blamed for its delayed debut.

Dr. Berkner said: "Setting up the tracking stations seems to be the main problem. The stations will not be ready until next March."

He said 18 main stations, including 12 optical stations, will be established to keep tabs on the satellite as it orbits near the equator.

He said Western scientists have no definite information on the Russian satellite, also due to be launched next year as part of the IGY world-wide examination of the earth's phenomena and environment.

The presidential declaration will be aimed, they said, at bolstering friendly governments which fear Communist gains in Syria may strengthen Red subversives within their own borders.

The state department confirmed that an airlift of weapons for Jordan's armed forces would begin this week-end.

Big air force C-124 globe-masters will fly arms cargoes including 106 millimeter recoilless rifles to Jordan. The initial shipments are expected to arrive Monday.

A decision on a second weapons-airlift for Iraq has not been made yet. But, officials were known to be seriously weighing this.

Another resolution deplored the closing in increasing numbers of British national and provincial newspapers.

This 89th congress was one of the calmest on record, without a single call for a "card vote" to settle disputes over voting by show of hands.

The only noisy debate was when one delegate tried to expound the Soviet line on Hungary and was shouted down.

'For Health Reasons'

St. Laurent Announces Resignation as Leader

He'll Yield Helm After Convention

OTTAWA (CP)—Former Prime Minister St. Laurent, in a surprise move, announced Friday night he intends to resign for health reasons from the Liberal party leadership.

The 75-year-old lawyer-statesman added, however, that he would continue as chieftain until a successor could be chosen by a national convention which he expected would be held soon. He has led the party since 1948, when he succeeded former Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

"MEDICAL ADVICE"

"In the light of the medical advice that I have now received," said the announcement issued from his parliamentary office, "I have come to the conclusion that I no longer have the vigor and energy required to lead the party through a general election campaign."

The statement climaxed weeks of sporadic speculation, denied by him only this week, that he intended to quit before another election.

The announcement came just three weeks before a scheduled meeting of the Liberal party executive committee in Ottawa Sept. 30 to overhaul party machinery.

OFF FISHING

Mr. St. Laurent was unavailable for amplification of his statement. It appeared he might be off fishing.

The announcement caught the country by surprise. Carbon copies of his four-paragraph statement reached the parliamentary press gallery at the dinner hour, when it was practically deserted.

It found Duncan K. MacTavish, president of the National Liberal Federation, on a once-mending tour of Western Canada. Hon. Lester Pearson, former minister of external affairs and Mr. St. Laurent's heir-apparent, was at a Young Liberals' convention in Presqu'île, Ont.

"GREAT SERVICE"

Mr. Pearson said there he could think only of the country's loss and of the "great and unselfish service" Mr. St. Laurent had rendered Canada.

Hon. Paul Martin, former health minister, also at Presqu'île, said most Canadians would agree Mr. St. Laurent had "rendered distinguished service to his country."

Still unclear is whether Mr. St. Laurent will retain his Commons seat as member for Quebec East.

Indications of Mr. St. Laurent's plans were first read into his refusal, last June, to move into Stornoway, official residence provided for Opposition leaders.

Only last weekend an informant in close touch with political Ottawa said categorically he expected Mr. St. Laurent to retire "within the next few days and certainly before the Royal visit."

(The Queen is to reach Ottawa Oct. 12.)

Accustomed to having much to do, and much responsibility, the former prime minister was said to be dispirited at having what he considered to be the less-exacting role of Opposition chief.

He'll Keep His Seat Says Liberal

VANCOUVER (CP)—Hon. James Sinclair, fisheries minister in the last government, said Friday he believes Louis St. Laurent will remain in the House of Commons.

"I am sorry to see him retire, but the decision is his," said Mr. Sinclair, member for B.C.'s Coast-Capilano riding who has been mentioned as a likely candidate for the party leadership.

LESTER PEARSON
... likeliest to succeed

Mike Front-Runner But Not a Shoo-In

OTTAWA (CP)—The front-running man as successor to Louis St. Laurent as Liberal leader appears to observers here to be Lester Bowles (Mike) Pearson.

The 60-year-old Pearson, noted across Canada for his boyish smile and distinctive bowtie, was the internationally-known external affairs minister of the St. Laurent government that went out of office after the June 10 election.

But his selection may be no shoo-in at the Liberal convention that will choose the successor to the 75-year-old Mr. St. Laurent.

Some strong contenders are in prospect.

One is Walter Harris, 33, the former finance minister, who lost his Grey North, Ont. seat when the Liberals fell.

Another is Paul Martin, 54, former health minister, who retained his Essex East, Ont. seat comfortably.

A third is James Sinclair, Liberal fisheries minister before the election, who held British Columbia's Coast-Capilano for the party in the Liberal debacle.

Assuming Mr. Sinclair is tossing his support to Mr. Pearson, the former external affairs minister has a couple of strikes on possible opponents Harris and Martin.

Apart from Mr. Harris' election defeat, Liberals here have been saying for some time privately that the party could not put him over in Quebec, now the big stronghold of the Liberals in the country.

HARRIS IS BAPTIST
Mr. Harris is a Baptist, like Prime Minister Diefenbaker. A few years ago, he was quoted as saying at an obscure rural Ontario meeting that Canada must remain British and Protestant. Party people say this—whether the quotation was right or wrong—will not be forgotten in Quebec.

Diefenbaker

Saddened By Life's Exigencies

BANFF, Alta. (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Friday night he is saddened that Louis St. Laurent has given notice of his retirement as leader of the Liberal party.

Speaking before the annual dinner of the Canadian Bar Association, Mr. Diefenbaker said: "I don't permit myself the luxury of dinking those with whom I disagree... I am saddened that Mr. Louis St. Laurent... has seen fit by reason of the exigencies of life to give notice of his retirement."

"In his retirement—Canada loses in public life the services of one of those great and outstanding lawyers who gave the best of himself in public service."

"I say this as one who has known Mr. St. Laurent as a or wrong—will not be forgotten in Quebec."

End to Nuclear Arms Demanded by Unionists

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters)—Delegates representing more than 8,300,000 British trade unionists demanded Friday an end to all nuclear weapons manufacturing and testing.

The annual Trades Union Congress also passed to its general council a resolution asking that wiretapping be limited to cases of highest security, or cases in which the conversation itself constituted an offence.

Another resolution deplored the closing in increasing numbers of British national and provincial newspapers.

This 89th congress was one of the calmest on record, without a single call for a "card vote" to settle disputes over voting by show of hands.

The only noisy debate was when one delegate tried to expound the Soviet line on Hungary and was shouted down.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

(Reprinted from Oct. 20, 1956)

SOME people worry in the daytime. But I do my best worrying after midnight, when my head is clear, everyone else is asleep, and there is nothing to interrupt me but the rain dripping on the furniture and the rustle of the wind through the bills on the mantelpiece.

Under these conditions I can get in two or three solid hours' fretting about subjects that never come to mind in the day.

I think about the wedding present I bought six months ago for a childhood friend, and didn't mail. Would I be foolish to send it now? Should I keep it for another year or so and send it as a christening present?

Christening, eh? My little boy, at 18 months, is still technically a heathen. Really should get around to having him christened. It looks bad when the child is taller than the clergyman. Good thing the child's grandmother sent some clothes. Otherwise, more money to spend.

Money. There's a good serviceable worry topic. It's handy in the daytime, too, when I can write down columns of figures, tear them up and start again. At night, however, it's more entertaining. Each account payable comes to life, and they all trot through my head like sheep—except that counting them keeps me awake.

Still awake, yes? I worry about staying awake. Sleeping pills? They might become a habit. I worry about what might happen if I got in the habit of taking pills. I'd probably remain drowsy next day and have a hard time working.

Work. Who did I arrange to interview tomorrow morning? Have an idea I made an appointment with someone else at exactly the same time. Who? Should get a small book and write these things down.

Books? Come to think of it, two or three books to be returned. Know where they are—in those two big boxes in the cupboard. Must sort through all those boxes, get things in order, tidy that gigantic pile of junk in the basement.

Basement? Must move those beer bottles into the basement, make room for that boat under the porch, where it's dry. All summer long, have been trying to get the old hulk caulked and painted. Job is only half done, boat now soaking up rain.

Rain. Winter's here. Have all those apples, meant to take them to a cider press. Now at least one-third of the apples gone bad, maybe more. Hard to carry them up those steps, because steps broken, need to be repaired before some visitor fractures neck. How to find time for all these things? Try to get better organized. Have some story ideas in mind. Must write them, make some extra money.

Money. Stories. Apples. Boat. Books. Basement. Christening. Wedding present. Only one solution. Go downstairs, write all these worries on piece of paper, mail them to Dr. Norman Vincent Peale.

You Can't Help Heredity But You Can Be Careful

This is the seventh in a series of 15 articles on heart attacks... what they do to you, how you may avoid them, and what causes them.

By EARL URELL

You can't control some things that determine whether you will have a heart attack. You can't for example pick your parents. Heredity plays a role in heart disease.

Backing this up, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. studied policyholders each of whom reported that a close relative—a parent, brother or sister—had died with heart disease under age 60.

This group's risk of dying of heart ailment was twice as high as that of the average insured person.

There is implicit advice in these figures and in similar data from other research. If you have a person with a heart disease close to you on your family tree, you must be even more watchful of the things you can control: diet, weight, exercise and possibly smoking.

What is it exactly that you inherit that makes you susceptible to a heart attack? Scientists don't know exactly, but there are some clues.

You could inherit your body type. A few studies, including one of young heart attack victims made by Dr. Menard Gertler and Dr. Paul Dudley White, show that the muscular, heavy-set fellow who has gone to fat is the most susceptible to coronary artery disease. The skinny, long-boned type is more immune.

What type are you? Just look in the mirror. Are you muscular—the mesomorph? Round and soft and chubby—the ectomorph? Or long and thin and lean—the endomorph?

A quick test for body build is to grab your wrist with thumb and index finger. Do the fingers touch or overlap? Then you tend to endomorph. Are they separated? You are mesomorph. The ectomorph is obvious.

The problem for the mesomorph—as far as heart attacks are concerned—is to keep from going ectomorphic. That he can do by diet.

Perhaps you might inherit a peculiar way your body has of handling certain chemicals—particularly cholesterol, the fatty substance that coats the inside of arteries. Your body manufactures cholesterol. You may be one of those who makes more than is necessary.

The excess would then pour into your blood stream. A recent Mount Sinai Hospital (New York) study found whole

Winter Job Drive Covers Whole Area

An attempt to increase winter employment in Victoria has spread to include the whole of the Greater Victoria area.

The Winter Employment Committee was augmented yesterday by the membership of Reeves Fred Norris of Oak Bay, A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt and Arthur Ash of Saanich. Formerly it consisted of city business men and labor representatives.

"The committee was formed to encourage the levelling of employment between winter and summer, to relieve much of the seasonal fluctuation created by ways of thinking rather than by actual seasonal conditions," H. J. Fox, manager of the National Employment Commission, said yesterday.

An intensive drive to persuade Greater Victoria residents to have work done during the winter that they would normally hold over until the summer will start this month.

Meanwhile, the employment situation in the area has slightly improved over the past week. The number of unemployed men is 1,678—65 fewer than for last week—although unemployed women increased by 23 to 669.

The figure for unemployed men is only 100 more than the best figures recorded during the year—in May when the seasonal boom was at its peak.

Vacancies for men are being reported in a wide variety of occupations, but most vacancies for women exist in the domestic and restaurant fields. There is an increased demand for competent stenographers.

Pilot Hero Saved 14

A veteran RCAF pilot whose parents have lived in Victoria since 1945 was killed Thursday when his jet aircraft plunged into Toronto harbor—but his last effort saved 14 lives.

Wing Cmdr. Howard R. Norris, 38, son of Harry W. Norris, 608 Yates, was killed in a CF-100 display before thousands along the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

The accident occurred as RCAF and U.S. aircraft demonstrated flypasts and aerobatics before CNE throngs. Wing Cmdr. Norris' jet was leading the one group past the packed grandstands, flying low over the water.

The plane climbed in a steep loop, faltered at 2,000 feet and twisted in its path. Directly in its path was the Royal Canadian Yacht Club ferry Kwasind, with 14 persons aboard.

"The pilot seemed to fight the plane and steer off from us just enough," said the ferry's skipper, Capt. Arthur Scott.

The jet "disappeared in a spout of water 100 yards from the Kwasind."

Mr. Norris in Victoria learned of his son's death in a telephone call from his youngest boy, Allan, with the Canadian General Electric in Toronto.

Wing Cmdr. Norris is survived by his widow and six children, living at Bagotville, Que., where he commanded No. 432 all-weather fighter, interceptor squadron.

He was one of five children in the Norris family. They grew up in Regina, where Howard joined the air force; Allan the won fame as a member of the navy, and Margaret, now Mrs. Regina Dales football team, and M. L. Young, the women's dias a hockey, baseball and tennis player. RCAF. Their father is a veteran of the First World War.

All the Norris children joined. Fruits and vegetables account for 95 per cent of the national supply of vitamin C.

Acrimony and Hope

Arms Talks Break Up

LONDON (AP)—The London disarmament talks collapsed Friday night. Delegates to the United Nations subcommittee on disarmament referred the issues to the UN General Assembly.

After nearly six months of tedious negotiations, the five-power subcommittee acknowledged it could not reach agreement. No date was set for another meeting. The talks were adjourned in a strange atmosphere of both acrimony and friendliness that appeared to leave some hope for future consultations.

Delegates for all members—Britain, the United States, Russia, France and Canada—said progress had been made. But they agreed unanimously the problem of cutting military forces and their weapons now should be aired in debate at the General Assembly session beginning Sept. 17.

Charles Ritchie of Canada said he is convinced that the middle and smaller powers in the General Assembly will find the Western partial disarmament proposals eminently reasonable.

U.S. delegate Harold E. Stassen said the biggest single obstacle to an accord was Russia's refusal to agree to quit building H-bombs. But Soviet delegate Valerian Zorin charged: "The Western powers have no intention of embarking on the road to real disarmament. They have no desire whatever to re-

Cuban Revolution Breaks Out Again

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—Heavy fighting broke out in Cienfuegos again Friday after the government declared it had completely crushed rebel forces.

Reports indicated 125 persons have been killed or wounded since the revolt broke out suddenly Thursday.

Jet planes, troops and armored cars and tanks attacked three buildings in the naval base city of south central Cuba where small clusters of die-hard rebels apparently had hidden.

The new fighting began after midnight and died down when the rebel resistance collapsed. President Fulgencio Batista's government announced.

The Cuban high command placed the total casualties at about 75, but it apparently did not take into account the post-midnight battle. The government sent airborne troops, armor and fighter planes to Cienfuegos Thursday after about 400 followers of rebel chief Fidel Castro seized the national police station.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TELEPHONE COMPANY
"Canada's Second Largest Telephone System"

A Distinguished Result

CHIEF JUSTICE GORDON SLOAN'S report on the regulation of British Columbia forests is a most distinguished accomplishment. This thorough analysis of the present management licence system with pertinent and active recommendations for its improvement will be studied through the winter term by all concerned. We commend the decision of the government to forego a special session of the Legislature; the regular session in February should find all interests, and all parties, the better prepared to discuss what undoubtedly will become a classic forestry text.

In essence the commissioner has found that the forest management and sustained yield system, while in need of some change and improvement, has been a good working start. His Lordship's praise of Dr. C. D. Orchard and the professional foresters of the government service will be warmly echoed. From this start with suitable amendment British Columbia can work out a permanent, long-range forest policy which will meet the factual conditions of today, preserve the province's very valuable assets for the future, and insure a fair deal to all concerned with an industry which is one of B.C.'s most vital producers. Some of the chief justice's recommendations may be debatable, but there is not one of them which is lightweight or offhand. This is a considered, thoughtful finding.

There is one proposal in the report which the government could well take under advisement now, that advocating the lifting of the recently imposed 1 per cent tax on the industry. Lumber, no less than mining, is going through a difficult time and should not be expected to pay more from a lowered turnover. That condition could not perhaps have been foreseen when the new tax was imposed, but it would be wisdom to reconsider the impost in the light of actual circumstances. The same argument might apply to the mining industry, for the fact is that British Columbia may need some such active stimulus to its primary producers before this year has ended if our industrial force is to be kept employed.

For the regulation of the forest industry itself the commissioner makes a number of direct proposals. Variation of the licence term by a reduction to a 21-year initial period, revision of cutting scales, wider use of secondary timber species, reforestation and many other factors are touched on with acute comment. In proposing that the Province treat with the Canadian Pacific Railway for re-acquisition of the E & N land belt, Chief Justice Sloan advances a challenging idea. That alone would have made this report a featured one. There is in addition, however, a rich field of factual finding, acute analysis and discerning recommendation throughout the whole piece.

Chief Justice Sloan has performed a monumental labor with sincerity and brilliance. His work should be considered on the same high plane, and outside of partisanship entirely.

Not So Backward After All

VICTORIANS have come under such heavy fire from cultural quarters in recent years for alleged lack of aesthetic appreciation it is refreshing to find they are not so backward after all. Far from lagging behind the rest of the nation in the promotion of artistic pursuits it is now stated that in fact they are leading the way. The metamorphosis is gratifying.

It comes about of course because of the centennial grants allotted to the Art Gallery. Oak Bay has now added its $8,500 share to the $70,000 voted collectively by the other Greater Victoria municipalities towards the erection of a new wing or wings. According to the gallery curator this is the first time in Canadian history that public funds have been devoted to such a project. One had thought that the national gallery in Ottawa and the art gallery in Vancouver owed something to civic or governmental purses, but no matter; it is pleasing to be told that Victorians are in the van of cultural things.

The centennial grants will be an asset to both the local Art Gallery and the community. They give a boost to the gallery's plans and to the morale of a curator who works hard to develop this centre of artistic activity. At least double the 30,000 persons who currently visit the gallery every year are expected to attend once the additions provide space for display of the rapidly growing collections.

The present attendance does not mean that 30,000 separate persons pass into the gallery annually; some patrons may attend 10 or 50 times each year. This indicates that only a comparatively small portion of the Greater Victoria public ever visit the gallery, and also that the government centennial grants are being allocated to what could be classed as a minority project. Art galleries everywhere however are an attraction for the few rather than the many, and they reflect the intellectual status of a community. For that reason alone the centennial grants will be well spent.

They should do a great deal also to widen public interest in the Art Gallery as a centre of artistic presentation of varying kinds. Art is not the mystery many people seem to think it is, and when built next year the new wings should make evident why it is that Victoria can now hold up its cultural head with self-respect.

Awkward Precedent

WHEN the city council voted $2,800 for a buffet dinner at $4 a plate for 700 delegates to the forthcoming Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention here it invited criticism and rebuke, which have not been slow in arriving. The Victoria Labor Council by resolution has roundly condemned this entertainment venture as wrongful use of public funds. It asks, quite properly, if the City will be prepared in future to dip into tax funds to entertain a visiting delegation of prominent labor leaders on the same scale. The city council left itself wide open to inquiries of that sort.

The convention is an important event for Victoria and those who will be attending it are in their own spheres important people. It is quite possible that by this

$2,800 gesture of goodwill—out of a fund reserved for "contingencies"—the City will so impress these influential visitors that the taxpayers indirectly will get more than their money back. This may be a small price to pay for a big ultimate return—but who knows? And is it proper to fish with tax money as bait?

Other cities in Canada might have been willing to bid with public funds for the chamber's favor, but that does not make the principle right. Previous councils here showed better judgment in rejecting all overtures for civic entertainment of convention delegates at public cost on the principle that if it can't be done for all it shouldn't be done for any. By setting this precedent the council may bring down a heap of trouble on its corporate head. The TLC protest is pertinent.

Interpreting the News:

Infiltration in India

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

COMMUNIST Party gains are plaguing East Asia's two big "neutralist" leaders. Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India and President Sukarno of Indonesia are exceedingly friendly to the Soviet Russian and Chinese Communists.

But neither wants Communism to flourish in his own country.

The Communists won control of the South India state of Kerala in elections held last February and March.

Now Indonesia's Communists have made startling gains in provincial elections held in Java, which contains about fifty million of that country's eighty million people.

In Kerala, the Communist government has imposed crippling taxes on plantation owners, encouraged riotous strikes and freed thousands of prisoners, including murderers.

Advices from India report that Kerala is being converted into a Communist totalitarian state.

So far, Nehru has been able to do nothing about it.

Kerala's chief minister—provincial prime minister—is E. M. S. Nambudripad. A wealthy member of a high-caste family, Nambudripad was for years a member of Nehru's own Congress Party. He went over to the Communists after the Second World War.

While carrying out a radical Communist program in Kerala, Nambudripad cleverly has steered away from any direct violation of the national constitution. Thus he has given Nehru no chance to intervene.

Perhaps encouraged by their success in Kerala, the Communists now have become active in Bihar state in northeastern India.

They have opened a campaign of disruption in plants of the gigantic iron, steel, automobile and locomotive combine which is controlled by the Tata family of industrialists.

The Indonesian Communists won their successes in a series of provincial elections held throughout Java.

In Jakarta province, which is the national capital area, the Communists emerged as the second strongest party. They pushed President Sukarno's Nationalist Party down to third place.

LIKE everything else contributing to man's more pleasing amenities, a radio to guarantee coveted results should be maintained in good order and be ready all the while to pick up the airborne programs planned for entertainment and educational purposes. It is entitled to a general overhaul occasionally by one qualified to deal with necessary adjustments when it gets a "bit off the beam." Take it from me, the most satisfying results are not always possible when one is tempted to tinker with the apparently sensitive mechanism oneself.

Some such thought was probably playing a part in reviving the old saying which had it that the "wish is father to the thought" when our radio seemed to require some tilting attention on the part of a neighbor interested enough in having a wireless machine giving of its best. He suggested it was his hobby as well as his chosen work, when I casually remarked my Dictator model was in the antique class. Anthony Beal, radio technician possessing a lot of experience with the medium of world-wide communication, intimated he would like to look at the venerable machine and see if it had any elderly ailments.

So it came about that one evening a short time ago I was sitting and watching an expert's deft fingers adjusting wires and getting rid of dust deposits evident enough. Suddenly I was thrilled a bit when he stirred up the force energizing the short wave channels of communication with far places with a clarity that would have assured understanding if one had been acquainted with the Russian language that came blaring out of the old radio following an announcement in English, "The Voice of Moscow."

It provided thrilling memories of sixty years ago, when it was pleasant pastime to sit and watch Robert Hutchison, promoting the wireless idea and the Z-ray phenomenon in the old Crow Baker power plant, situated at Fort and Langley. He was a keen student of the electric force, kept pace with the work of inventors like Preece, an Englishman, credited with inventing low-frequency telegraphy in 1895, and Marconi, the Italian who patented his invention of high-frequency telegraphy during 1896 in England.

Bob Hutchison was getting results with his experiments, too, and would have gone a long way in association with electrical promotion had he chosen localities of opportunity elsewhere. With the backing of two doctors, Ernest Hall and E. C. Hart, it was not long after the Roentgen discovery that Jubilee Hospital boasted an X-ray machine capable of showing through a fluoroscope the human heart functioning or photographic prints of any section of the same body. That machine would produce an output of 200,000 volts.

Bob Hutchison was keeping in touch with leading scientific journals with reference to progress being made with wireless by leading exponents of the principle about the same time Marconi electrified the world in 1901, after five years' experimenting with his patent. While he was in Newfoundland he received from a colleague in Cornwall a signal consisting of three dots, representing the letter "S" in the telegraphers' alphabet, which opened up an era in the progress of mankind, the end of which could still be a long way off.

In a small way that long-distance dramatizing of the phenomenon was repeated over Victoria Harbor about the same time, when some of Bob Hutchison's friends were witnesses to signals being received and sent between Point Ellice Bridge and Deadman's Island.

Lo, the poor Indian, is going to be remembered when it comes to filling the Senate vacancies and presenting people to the Queen.

He's also going to benefit when the government puts revision of the Indian Act on its legislative calendar. That may not be in this short fall session of Parliament, but the overhaul of the Indian Act is fairly high on the Diefenbaker priority list.

One of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's election promises was that he would appoint a member of the Indian race to the Senate. He has received scores of letters from Indians eager for an opportunity to serve in the Senate, and from both Indians and whites plumping for this or that Indian for the job.

His likeliest choice is G. C. "Slim" Monture, a full-blooded Iroquois and one of Canada's foremost metallurgists. Now in private business, Monture was one of the top officials of the Department of Mines before his retirement last year. Once, after he had completed a metallurgical assignment in Burma for the United Nations, the whole Burmese parliament stood to pay tribute to the Canadian Indian sitting in the parliamentary gallery.

The PM, in the way he has of telling his subordinates what he wants done and letting them figure out how to do it, threw the Queen's visit committee into a tizzy by issuing instructions for the inclusion in the ceremonies of representatives of the Indian race.

This order didn't mean the laying on of a group of buckskin-clad curiosities doing a native dance as the Queen drove by. Rather, the Indians are to be clothed in the full dignity of representatives of the indigenous population, and are to participate on a basis of equality with the representatives of the white population in welcoming the Queen.

This means Indians present in the Senate chamber when the Queen opens Parliament; Indians introduced to the Queen at the state reception at Rideau Hall, and perhaps even an Indian at the state dinner.

It's never been done before. Battered Lo is coming into his own.

The prime minister, who is an emotional person, has always had a soft spot in his heart for the noble redman. As a boy he knew plains Indians in the days before civilization overwhelmed the tribes. He knew Sioux who had fought Custer at Little Big Horn. A frequent visitor to the Diefenbaker homestead in the District of Assiniboia (now Saskatchewan) was Gabriel Dumont, who had been attorney-general in Riel's cabinet. As a criminal lawyer, Diefenbaker often defended Indians, although many lawyers rejected Indians as clients.

Diefenbaker's indignation was genuine and deep when a joker in the Indian Act enabled certain Indians on the oil-rich Hobbema reserve to try to oust other members of the band, in the hope of increasing their own shares of band money. Those whose status was challenged were descendants of Indians who had accepted scrip—but Diefenbaker knew how shamefully white men had swindled many Indians of their scrip. While this joker section of the act is no longer operative, it will likely be removed anyway. What further changes may be made it is not known, but largely because of the PM's interest greater emphasis will be put on government programs to help the Indians become self-supporting, self-respecting, integrated members of Canadian society.

The Packsack

The Wild-Life Cycle

By GREGORY CLARK

WE DO NOT usually think of bunny rabbits as meat eaters. But the snowshoe hare or varying hare which, in a large part of Canada, is that attractive little denizen of cedar and spruce swamps that changes its coat each year from bush brown in summer to snow white in winter, is declared by trappers and scientists now confirm it, to be fond of frozen meat.

Trappers who bait their traplines with meat, often with snowshoes hare meat, actually caught the gentle little, storybook animal red handed or red toothed in the act of feeding on the frozen meat. W. H. Burt, in his new book on the mammals of the Great Lakes region, states that trappers claim the bunnies will not touch carcasses that have not been torn or bloodied. In other words, they will not damage trapped dead animals, so destroying pelts, as do several other animals that disturb the traplines. But there is no doubt they will eat frozen flesh if it is exposed in the bait.

There should, of course, be times in the social cycle of the varying hare when they will eat anything. For this animal is the most sensational exemplar of the cycle principle in wild life, with the exception of the lemming. In a cycle of nine or eleven years their numbers will increase from one per square mile to several hundred in the same area. During these peaks of population, when their cedar swamps become so crowded that the hares range out into the woodlands, the competition for food during the height of winter must be severe.

The "crash," as biologists call the sudden fall-off of those excessive populations is one of the most spectacular events in natural history. Predators move in to the areas so crowded. Disease seems to spread like fire. Other causes not yet determined by science seem to be at work. In a single season the square miles that supported hundreds of hares are reduced to one per square mile again. And the slow cycle of rebuilding starts all over again.

In the night I heard unearthly small screeches coming from some trees, and when I shot the flashlight beam I spotted a great horned owl with a snowshoe hare in its clutches. The rabbit was making real meat-eater sounds, and I was a little sorry it did not take a bite out of the owl, to see what owl meat tastes like.

But it seems the hares have a due sense of fate, and are humble in its presence, except for a few screams. They appear to know they are what naturalists have called the "bread of the woods."

Canadian Notebook

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

YE Olde Englands of Victoria's tourist trade no doubt serves its purpose of creating a sufficiently attractive "foreign land" on America's doorstep, to bring some healthy American dollars even though less 5 per cent. Nowhere more evident than in Sam Lane's delightfully 17th century interior to an Edwardian mansion, and the Ann Hathaway replica next door. I gather that $7,000 worth of antiques, business acumen and solid showmanship have provided a return which allows no argument on the value of Ye-Old-Englands as a business enterprise.

Four-poster beds, medieval armour, modern plumbing and ice water can do a great deal for our American friends. There is no reason why it should not. It is obviously a contrast to Las Vegas, Reno or Dallas. We should not really complain of just one more in a world of synthetics.

What is worrying is the kind of synthetic humanity which seems to be growing up. In England we have our teddy boys and their feminine counterparts; in Victoria there seems to be the equivalent emerging in what we used to call the "zoo suit." They too have the female counterparts who seem to delight in lounging, shouting and indulging in horseplay on the street corners of Victoria. The more expensive of them seem to acquire ancient automobiles with perforated mufflers and fires designed especially for making maximum screams.

The main game, apparently, is to haunt the areas of their less fortunate unmounted brethren and steal their pedestrian females. It is the old game, of course, even though played with modern weapons; but whereas it used to be incidental and occasional it now seems to have graduated to the status of a major recreation. It suggests that there is a major job to be done all over the world in providing some incentive for the intelligent use of leisure.

It is an extraordinary thing that our physicists and scientists can harness power which, for good or evil according to our choice, will change the face of the globe; but the same educational system which produces them is incapable of producing in those less brilliant a capacity to appreciate leisure and to really value what has been achieved by the blood, sweat and tears of their ancestors.

One should not be surprised, of course, except for the subconscious feeling that this is conventionally regarded in Europe as an old-world problem, the indirect result of overcrowding, inadequate housing, the dead-end jobs of intense industrialization, mean streets and general frustration. Indeed it is the sort of problem which many sociologists have sought to solve by encouraging emigration and new opportunities in spacious lands.

That, probably, is the reason why it seems strange to find a similar problem in different costume half-way around the world. Some of course may be the delayed action of the English and European problems, and it would be interesting to know whether Canada has made any inquiry into the background of these youngsters. It is difficult, of course, until they get into real trouble. It is an expression, too, of the much greater problem—the growing urbanization all over the world despite the developments, such as radio and television and electricity, which make rural living more civilized and tolerable.

Some educationists with whom I have spoken infer that it is really a half-way problem which will cure itself—that at the moment we are suffering from mass half-education and immature minds which will be remedied as educational methods improve, school leaving age is extended and that delicate area between half and full education is gradually bridged. It is to be hoped so, but there is an obvious need to speed the process.

Attempts at correction often bring added problems in their wake because there are always other factors—home background especially; and that is something practically impossible to adjust without dictatorial intervention which can only be justified in extreme cases. The right of a parent to ruin the child is a basic human tragedy and a basic democratic right; and to instill through public education an attitude of mind and elevation which is in conflict with parents creates problems which may well be worse than the original disease.

The only conclusion which may be drawn seems to be that youth the world over still has an incapacity to use leisure intelligently, that much progress is illusory, and that possibly the youngsters who had to work six days a week at a craft for 12 hours a day were really very much happier than their modern counterparts who do not know what to do with the time which science and machinery have given them.

Letters to the Editor

Why Take It?

A recent letter to the editor, headed "American Money," takes it for granted that shops, restaurants, etc., accept American money in payment for goods and services. Why ever should they? To me this seems quite wrong because throughout the rest of the world, a traveller in a foreign country always first exchanges his money at a bank or exchange bureau.

Certainly, no Frenchman, for example, would offer francs to a shop in Stockholm or Madrid. The point is that it is not the currency of the country and not legal tender. The same applies to United States dollars, which each tourist should exchange for Canadian money either on arrival here or before leaving his own country.

False Figures

The responsible propagandist should in the first place be armed with incontestable facts and figures, for how otherwise can his arguments be properly regarded by the uninformed?

The tenacity of Frank L. Partridge is beyond the bounds of credulity, for he seeks to influence the reader by quoting random figures entirely out of context, and in a manner calculated to misrepresent and mislead. In his original letter, the statements of Mr. Partridge regarding the earnings and fringe benefits of dairy workers and drivers were definite and categorical. They were also inaccurate and grossly exaggerated, and calculated to present a false conception regarding the earnings of rank and file personnel.

He now seeks to justify his use of figures palpably inaccurate by stating that they were received by him in "good faith," although a routine check from obvious sources would have readily revealed the true facts. It is safe to assume that many a wife has regarded her husband with grave suspicion after reading his letter!

Management and employees both are sensible to the need of supplying milk to the consumer at lowest economic cost, and notwithstanding problems of supply peculiar to this Island the fact remains that the price of this essential commodity has been stable over a period of years, during which bread, meat, sugar, in fact all staples including butter, Mr. Partridge, have advanced to the dictates of the market.

Shameful Thing

As I look at the delicate, sensitive features of that lovely young colored girl, and the ugly animal-like face of the crude, grinning white youth behind her, and read of some students who later threw rocks and stones at her, I ask myself, "What kind of people are they?"

Are we so-called Christians who pray to God each day, or when we go to Church each Sunday—if ever? What a disgraceful thing this is. Who have been preaching Christianity for the past 2,000 years... and commit this shameful action against our colored brothers and sisters, since that is what they and those devils who mutilated that negro, who was a veteran also, and ruined his life.

Let us try to remember we are brothers and sisters, under the Fatherhood of God and try to live as Jesus Christ, taught us to "love one another."

Liberal Aldermen

I noticed in The Colonist that our city council has granted $2,800 to give a dinner to the Chamber of Commerce—people who can well afford it—and at a cost of $4.00 per plate.

I wonder what the council would say if the old age pensioners were to ask for a supper at Christmas—and not $4.00 per plate; that could not be done. They are very liberal in giving taxpayers' money away but if we the OAP organization were to ask for a little help we would be turned down flat.

That $2,800 Dinner

After reading a letter by Mrs. V. Wickran in the Sunday Colonist, I would like to answer a few statements by the city aldermen in council on Aug. 22, about paying the high sum of $2,800 dollars for dinner for the visiting delegates of the Chamber of Commerce.

One of the council said, "How cheap can we get?" This man is really generous with his father's loaf, for he does not live in the city of Victoria.

Another alderman, a prominent member of the Chamber of Commerce, said that it was customary for the visiting delegates to be entertained by the city they visit. Well, then, let the Chamber of Commerce entertain their friends the same as other organizations, and stop the ever-increasing rise in taxes in this city.

The $2,800 could be spent on garbage disposal and help to rid our beaches of filth and disease and start at the city end instead of the home end to make our city sanitary.

Free to Develop Columbia

Canada Holds All the Cards

BANFF, Alta. (C.P.)—Canada appears legally free to develop the great resources of the Columbia River in British Columbia as it sees fit but has a moral obligation to assure mutual benefit to all concerned with the international water resource.

This was the consensus of a panel discussion Friday in the international law committee of the Canadian Bar Association, which considered in a broad sense the international legal problems of developing the Columbia and its tributaries.

Under a treaty of 1909 Canada has legal right to develop the vast hydro-electric resources of this water system without answering to American authorities downstream, the panel was told.

Under international law, Canada's right to do this also is clear.

But for various reasons, not the least of which, panelists said, are the friendly relations that have always existed between Canada and the United States, the best solution to the Columbia development problem is through treaty between the two nations.

Bourne also stated that under international law principles, it is lawful to make some diver-

Now past 51,000 miles over the West's toughest roads—equal to 5 years of driving!

In searing desert heat RPM Supreme Motor Oil gave protection as good or better than a heavy grade oil. And in weather as cold as 40-below in Alaska, this same oil let the Big Run cars start in one second flat—because it reduces friction like a light oil.

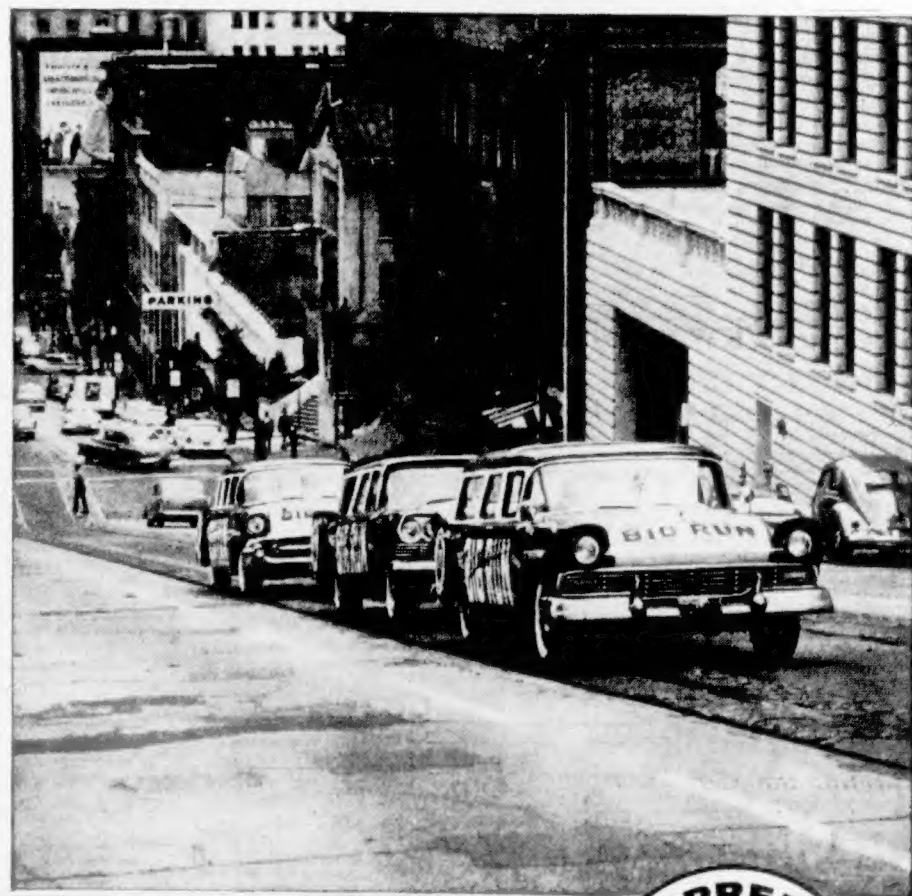

Good as new! Inspected after 51,000 miles, these engines were still running perfectly, showed virtually no wear.

Proof that RPM Supreme guards parts so well, keeps them so clean and free of sludge at all temperatures, that engines can outlast the life of the car itself.

Give Us Time, Say Soereds

No Prompt Action Likely on Report

Forests Minister Ray Williston said yesterday it would be some time before the government decided which recommendations in the Sloan report on forestry would be implemented.

"We can't say we're going to do this, this and that," said the minister. "We have already promised industry we would hear their representations."

Mr. Williston indicated there would be no fall session of the legislature to consider the report and new forestry legislation this year.

Premier Bennett refused to comment on the calling of a special session.

"I haven't had time to see the report," he said. "All I know is what I read in the papers."

Earlier Mr. Williston had said it would not be "fair" to comment on the report until he had time to study it over the week-end.

Meanwhile the investigation into how a Vancouver newspaper got an advance copy continued yesterday but there was no indication whether the culprit has been found.

Mr. Williston lashed out at opponents who had charged that the government was trying to keep the report secret until after Monday's three byelections.

"Anyone who implies anything political concerning the presentation of the report is completely off base," he said.

Meanwhile CCF leader Robert Strachan interpreted the report as "bearing out every criticism the CCF has been making about the handling of our forest resources."

"We have always said the province should retain control of its natural resources," Mr. Strachan said. "It was a tragic error to turn over our forests to private companies in perpetuity."

"We can only hope that too much damage has not been done to our forests through the granting of existing forest management licences in perpetuity. We had many times urged against any more but they went merrily on their way."

"We hope there is enough left to ensure the future of forestry in B.C."

The Sloan report gives Premier Bennett "complete control of every dollar in the lumber business," Gordon Gibson, ex-MLA and B.C. lumber baron, said yesterday.

He said adoption of the recommendations contained in the chief justice's report would "turn the whole country into a government state."

"It would be beginning of the end of the free enterprise system as we know it in B.C. It's the same principle as Russia. It puts one man, Bennett, in complete control," said the man who joined the legislature in 1955 with his outspoken criticisms of government forest management policy.

Mr. Gibson said the report is "the poorest submission ever made to the people of B.C. — only they don't know it yet. I'm sorry I'm the only one who sees it this way."

He prefaced his comments by saying: "The report is absolutely contrary to anything I believe in. Anything I say would be libelous."

If You Get the Flu Stay Home in Bed

CHICAGO (AP) — If you feel faint, fluids, and agents to catch Asian flu, says an American Medical Association council, don't take antibiotics or sulfa drugs, and don't go to a hospital.

A report by the AMA council on drugs says the best treatment to guard against complications is bed rest at home, sulfa drugs, and agents to catch Asian flu, says an American Medical Association council, don't take antibiotics or sulfa drugs, and don't go to a hospital.

The council says sulfa drugs and antibiotics do not affect the flu virus, and their use may lead to the development of bacteria which becomes resistant to their action.

The council recommends home treatment to avoid possible exposure to bacterial complications in hospitals.

However, all flu patients who develop secondary bacterial infections should be treated with a sulfa or antibiotic drug after careful checks for sensitivity, the council adds.

Timber Purchase

'Major Share Of E & N Cost Up to Ottawa'

The federal government should pay "the larger part" of the cost of buying the E & N Belt timber, according to noted historian B. A. McKelvie.

Purchase of the timber for $108,000,000 at three per cent over 50 years was recommended by Chief Justice Gordon Sloan in his report on the forest industry.

Mr. McKelvie said yesterday the original grant of the E & N lands was not made by the provincial government but by the federal government.

IMPERIAL NATIONAL
"The cost of the Island railway was an imperial and national policy, not a provincial one," said Mr. McKelvie. "It was part of the terms of the Union... as amended by the Carleton Place terms of 1874."

In a report on the proposed railway through B.C. the importance of the railway between Victoria and Nanaimo was stressed by Maj. Gen. R. C. Moody in 1880, he continued.

Gen. Moody, who had previously commanded the Royal Engineers in B.C., was called upon by Sanford Fleming, CMG, the engineer in charge of railways in Canada to make a report on B.C.

MILITARY ASPECT
In reporting on the military aspect of the railway the general stressed that the U.S. owned San Juan Island could be fortified and in the event of war would command the waterway between the island and Vancouver Island.

This could have cut off the approaches to the Fraser River and Burrard Inlet through the Strait of Juan de Fuca, said Mr. McKelvie.

"Gen. Moody strongly stressed the necessity of the Island railway to Nanaimo, pointing out that it would be possible to develop a port at the head of the Saanich Inlet, from where shipping could proceed to Burrard Inlet and New Westminster without having to pass San Juan Island," he continued.

LARGER USE
He also said that the general reported a larger use could be made by a railway between Victoria and Nanaimo in that barges could make the short haul between Nanaimo and the mainland thus making it impossible for an enemy to block the straits.

"It would appear that this was the reason why such haste was made by the Dominion to assure the construction of the railway to follow the plans suggested by Gen. Moody," he added.

"Because this was a national and imperial policy B.C. alone should not have been called upon to pay the cost," Mr. McKelvie said. "If at this late date it is advisable to buy back the timber... then the larger part of that cost should be borne by the federal government."

SAFETY PRECAUTION
Nothing of a medicinal or chemical nature should be kept that is not clearly labeled.

Sailors Complete Touchdown Drive

Referee Bob Webster throws both hands high in the air as Navy fullback Jerry Porter plows over the Mayo Vampire goal line for the first of his two touchdowns in last night's Victoria Intermediate Canadian Football League game at Royal Athletic

Park. Arriving too late to stop Porter are Ken Stokes (64), Leroy Bond (70) and Don Brownlee (72). Navy won the game, 12-0. (Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Navy Blanks Vamps in Debut; Porter Gets Both Touchdowns

Navy unveiled its 1957 entry in the Victoria Intermediate Canadian Football League last night, and sailed past Mayo Vampires, 12-0, for a first-place tie with the defending champion Oak Bay Drakes.

But despite the easy victory some observers left Royal Athletic Park wondering just how the Sailors are going to fare against the Drakes, who took Vampires, 21-8, in the league opener last week.

Navy won, and won handsomely. However, the game wasn't the kind that can give a fair indication of just how strong the Sailors are. Compared to the opener, it was a ragged affair from the start, marred by too many fumbles, too many missed assignments on both sides, and too many penalties.

Coach Bert Nelson, with several regulars out of action, sent the Sailors out in double full-back formation, with holdover

Jerry Porter, Fred Toth, Jerry Kruse and quarterback Otto Brown doing most of the carrying.

Porter and Toth, running from the fullback slots, were sprints throughout on straight power plunges. Porter scored both touchdowns in the first half.

Both touchdowns went unconverted. All-star tackle Doug Brown, who did all the place-kicking for Navy last year, has switched to the Drakes, and Pop Reeves wasn't close to the crossbar on either attempt.

DIFFERENT APPROACH
Vampires tried something a little different from their usual style last night. Wayne Henderson went all the way at quarterback, but when there was any passing to be done, it was usually Charlie Bishop doing the throwing after a handoff.

Bishop, better known for his powerful running, surprised with a 30-yard pass to Al Marks in the first quarter, but he was a foot over the scrimmage line when he threw it.

A Vampire fumble, the first of several, set up the first touchdown. The Sailors took over on

Petes Capture Eastern Crown

Peterborough Timbermen won the Eastern Canadian senior lacrosse title for the seventh consecutive year Friday night, edging Long Branch Pontiacs, 9-8, at Long Branch to sweep the best-of-seven series in four games.

The Petes, who have won the Mann-Cup five times in the seven seasons, will meet either the defending champion Nanaimo Timbermen or Victoria Shamrocks in the Canadian final. Timbermen and the Rocks clash at Nanaimo tonight in the fourth game of the Western final.

Playing coach Ike Hildebrandt paced the winners last night with three goals. Bobby Allan first game scheduled for Tuesday and singles went to Lou Nickle and Bev Grove.

Peterborough's bid to place two teams in Canadian lacrosse finals failed last night, the Peterborough Juniors lost out to Brampton, 8-7, in the deciding game of the best-of-seven Eastern final. Petes had led the series, 3-2 at one stage.

Brampton will host the Victoria Juniors Rocks in the best-of-seven Minto Cup final, the first game scheduled for Tuesday and singles went to Lou Nickle and Bev Grove.

All Western Grid Clubs Hit Hard by Injuries

No matter how serious your troubles are, the Western Inter-provincial Football Union clubs may have bigger ones.

All five teams report injuries to first-string players as they prepare for the weekend games in which four clubs play one game and the national champion Edmonton Eskimos start twice.

Today's schedule has Edmonton at Vancouver against British Columbia Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders in Winnipeg to play Blue Bombers.

Monday the league-leading Calgary Stampeders visit Edmonton for a battle with Eskimos that could involve league leadership.

Three of the five teams have obtained new players for injured personnel, a move allowed under the rule that a team must declare 12 imports 48 hours after its third game and then is allowed 14 changes until Oct. 15.

STAMPS STRENGTHEN
Coach Otis Douglas' Stampeders, who have won four straight, appear to have acquired the strongest additions in fullback Howie Waugh, who led the WIFU in rushing in 1954 and then didn't play in the loop in 1955 or last year, and tackle Burdett Hess, an outstanding player last season.

Both signed tryout contracts and will be on the import reserve list so they will be available in event of injuries.

How to Outwit an Onion

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

It isn't particularly difficult to grow good-looking onions, for given really rich soil and lots of old, rotted manure, they practically grow themselves. The real trick in growing onions lies in building good keeping quality into these pungent vegetables so they won't rot in storage.

You often run into difficulty towards the end of the growing season, and in a cool, dampish summer it is sometimes hard to persuade the stupid things to stop growing and ripen off, for if you harvest an onion while it is still in active growth, it won't keep.

If the onions behaved according to the text-books, the foliage should show yellow tips and fall down of its own accord sometime in late August or early September. More often, though, the stubborn things just stay green and upright, and have to be given a strong hint that the honeymoon is over. The traditional way of jolting an onion out of its youthful growing habit is to bend down the foliage, which cuts off the supply of sap to the leaves and forces the bulbs to start ripening. There is some danger in this technique, though, unless it is done at precisely the right time.

If the leaves are bent down while still full of sap and brittle, they may break and crack at the bend. This is just about the same as pulling the onions too soon—they won't keep in storage. Moreover, if the leaf-bending is done too soon, it will sometimes shock the onion into second child.

hood, whereupon it starts making second growth—pushing up a new set of leaves—which definitely ruins the crop for storage.

If the leaves are too brittle to bend without cracking, some degree of limpness can be induced by going along the rows with a digging fork, inserting the tines under the bulb on the slant and prying up just enough to break some of the lower roots. Just a little upward pressure is enough, and you can usually feel the deep roots snap under the tension. The tops will die down naturally soon after this operation.

It is a good idea to do a spot of weeding around the bulbs at the same time, so the sun can get at them freely and hasten the ripening process. The soil should be scratched away, too, so that each bulb is sitting right up on top of the ground, fully exposed to the sun and air.

When the foliage is more yellow than green but still not completely dead, it is safe to lift your bulbs. Forging them up is preferable to pulling them out of the ground by hand, as pulling tends to crack the outer skin.

Once lifted, the onions need a further period of finishing in the sun, preferably in a frame, greenhouse or sun porch. If none of these are available, spread them out on a hard path or driveway in full sun, turning them daily so that all sides are exposed to the sun. It helps if you have an old tarp or plastic sheet to cover them during rain and at night, to keep the dew off.

Ripening and drying is complete when the roots and foliage will crumble off freely, and the onions may be put into storage in a cool, dry place. In cleaning them, don't remove any but the really loose skin, and handle the bulbs as carefully as eggs, for one tiny bruise can start a whole bagful to rotting.

Tired of Baby Food?

(While John Crosby is on vacation, his column will be conducted by guest writers.)

If canned baby-food were free no doubt some people would eat nothing but canned baby-food. But not many. Not for long. The most miserly person, after working his way through a certain number of cans, would break down and buy something more tempting to the adult palate.

No doubt baby-food is nourishing, aseptic, reinforced with abundant vitamins; no doubt it would sustain life indefinitely if there were nothing else obtainable, but you don't want it, and I don't. You don't want the bland bland bite probably, to say nothing of long, increasingly boring years on the stuff.

Yet the case for baby-food.

If it were free, would be the same as the case for the television and radio fare. That fare is made up out of the cheapest available nutrients, put together to offend no taste, no sect, no religion, no race, no school of thought, no philosophy, no frame of mind, no possible audience.

The networks have been searching for years for the lowest common denominator. Sometimes they think they have found it. Sometimes I think they have found it. But the networks are not to blame. The advertisers are not to blame. We are. Radio and television have sunk to the position of pabulum and pap because we have been willing to accept savorless stuff rather than pay for the free thought of free minds and the endless variety of entertainment that could come to us over the air if the media were emancipated.

It is possible that the methods now proposed for pay-as-you-go television are not as convenient as the acceptance of the piped-in supplies now delivered by the networks and advertisers.

To get the programs you want you might have to pay as much as you pay for magazines, or more. But the changes that would ensue would be more than worth it. A great medium that is now almost exclusively devoted to low-grade entertainment would begin to take on the characteristics and standards of the worlds of publishing and the theatre.

If you were willing to pay your quarter, or your dollar if necessary, to get something more challenging than mush you could have it. There would be nothing to prevent you from sticking to the present offerings if you didn't have the price. But the choice would be like the choice between one of those throw-away newspapers that you find unwanted on your doorstep and the New York Times.

Of course there are enormous forces holding us back from free choice of programs. The large advertising companies, the networks themselves, the concerns that market nationwide products, all have enormous investments of capital, personnel, and know-how in the present regime.

There is no choice among the stations at present. Wherever you turn you get childish stuff, and it will be that way so long as we won't pay for what we want.

We have sold our gigantic television birthright for a mess of pottage.

If he lacked tops in hearts. It might be essential to inhibit a heart lead. And if the opponents held strength in hearts they might consider its defensive value as making it not necessary to sacrifice against the vulnerable game by bidding five diamonds.

Over three hearts, West passed. North bid four clubs. East passed and South went to five clubs. West had such good defence he thought about doubling to keep his partner from bidding five diamonds, but it proved unnecessary as East did not have the necessary material.

South's failure to bid spades helped right from the beginning. West opened the spade king and South let West hold the trick, dropping the six-spade from his hand so as to make East's five look like a come-on signal. West was fooled and continued by playing the spade queen. This set up the entire spade suit with only one loser and let dummy get rid of both hearts, permitting South to make six.

Even if West had elected to open a diamond, South might have made his contract provided he did not play dummy's ace and discard a heart. Ruffing the opening lead in his hand, he should play one round of clubs to prevent either opponent from signalling on the second club lead and then lead a spade from dummy, "finishing" the jack. Only an immediate heart shift from West would set the hand, and the chances very much favored the lead of another diamond as West's "safest" return.

Observatory To Open Hour Early

People who like making regular Saturday evening visits to the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory will have to alter their schedules a bit. Observatory officials said yesterday visiting hours will be from 8 to 10 p.m. on Saturdays, from now until the end of November. Hours have been from 9 to 11 p.m. Saturdays, but daylight hours are now becoming shorter.

Officials said the observatory had been doing a "rush business" in interested tourists and residents throughout the summer.

A number of the life insurance companies have announced that they will stop many of their policies. This is due to the new government agency loans. The companies are concerned that the new loans will result in a loss of business for them.
